NOMAD CORDLESS PRESSURE WASHER

This is the second fully stand alone pressure washer that we've used and the short review is that this is the best. Why? Several reasons. Perhaps most importantly the 18v battery helps to provide ample pressure for bike washing. In fact any more and I reckon you'd be running into problems with blasting lube out from places you shouldn't be. The battery itself is also a removable one just like you'd find on a cordless drill, and should you wish you can carry a spare with you. But, considering after just an hour's charging it will last for four full tankful's (a very generous 14 litres each) we're not sure you'd ever need to. It also comes supplied with a 12v cigarette lighter adaptor, so should you have your car near you then you can use it almost endlessly like that too.

Those qualities almost make it a winner on their own, but the whole design is just superb, they seem to have thought of everything. The water container has a filter on the entrance so you can happily fill it up from a stream or the like without having to worry about debris screwing the pump, and once you've filled it the padded shoulder strap makes carrying it a damn site easier. The hose is also really long and the quality of the gun on the end of it seems first class. I particularly like the lock on feature because it just saves you from having to constantly squeeze the trigger. Oh, and then when you've finished using it there's a neat storage pouch for the hose which crucially is amply big enough so you don't have to spend half an hour trying to cram it back in like that tent you bought the other week. A quality bit of kit that's just as useful at home as it is on weekends away.
